

ROE V. WADE, ETC.

As with the Ukraine War, doesn't anyone think the timing of this Roe v. Wade thing is a bit suspicious? Didn't they both seem to sort of come out of nowhere, just in time to push other topics to the back pages? Just when the governors seemed to be in serious trouble after the vaccine crime against humanity, suddenly these huge stories conveniently fell from the clouds to steal all headlines.

Just think it about. Say you are one of the governors facing an incipient revolution from a middle class sick of being preyed upon, lied to, and used as human guinea pigs in Big Pharma experiments. Say you have truckers starting major strikes, millions of people collapsing and dying from gene therapies falsely sold as vaccines, and an economy in freefall due to mass looting. Say the people are waking up to your games across the board and aren't even tuning into your discredited propaganda machines like CNN, The New York Times, or other major outlets. Say the numbers of independent sources and reporters are viral, and that the rebellion is just one big event from snowballing out of your control. What do you do?

Well, you do the only thing you have ever known how to do: you bluff and misdirect. You lie your little asses off. You double or triple down on all the old lies and promote new ones as fast as you can think of them. Which is of course what we are seeing. And to get eyes off you, you dredge up all the most contentious old topics, hoping to rekindle any and all lingering wedge issues. Your only hope of avoiding a revolution against you is to incite a civil war, getting the people to fight one another instead of toppling you. You must push the divide and conquer strategy to its ultimate limits, using every set of magicians' mirrors you have. You need men fighting women, blacks fighting whites, gays fighting straights, old fighting young, and any other division you can manufacture at short notice. Ukraine fighting Russia, Catholics fighting Protestants, Christians fighting Muslims, even Asians fighting blacks. If they could they would bring back north fighting south, Union versus Confederacy. The only thing you won't see them mentioning much is Jews, since that hits way too close to home. Best ignore that wedge. [Also best to minimize the rich versus poor wedge, of course, since that is really what this is about. If you hear anything about that, it is that the rich are already paying too much in taxes. No seriously, that is the line, even from places like Infowars and Zerohedge.]

So Roe v. Wade is actually the perfect thing to reanimate right now, and they probably gave a huge raise to the guy who thought of it. That includes several very hot splits: man versus woman, left versus right, Christian versus atheist/agnostic. They are even selling it as a black/white wedge, though that is a stretch. That is already blowing up on them, because some of us are reminding the black community that it is their babies being aborted in disproportionate numbers. Is that really a benefit they want to fight to keep?

The truth is neither side is digging deep enough to understand what this is really about. The right is rejoicing while the left is going ballistic, but what neither side understands is that neither the Supreme Court nor the Phoenician Navy behind them gives a rat's ass about any of the moral or legal or social issues here. The topic wasn't reanimated in 2022 in order to correct a legal mistake from 1973. It wasn't reanimated to save fetuses or babies. It wasn't reanimated to decide the issue one way or the other, and I predict it won't. The issue will remain open, contested, and highly contentious, being sold in only the most fiery rhetoric on both sides, because only in that form does it benefit the governors. This has nothing to do with law or morality, it has to do with stirring the anthill. Again, they need you angry at one another to keep you from focusing on them and their crimes against humanity of the past decades. This is not about abortion, it is about creating a diversion. Like the fake war in Ukraine, it is yet another five minutes hate they hope to make permanent, focusing your hate on one another and off them. They need you screaming and waving flags instead of throwing them in jail, and this is just one more big flag-waving.

In that way, it can be seen to be yet another plank in the huge Men-are-Pigs project and split-the-sexes project that continues to accelerate. If your eyes are open, you can see that the Roe v. Wade project is being flanked by many other lesser projects aimed in the same direction. Look no further than the cover of People or Us magazines. This is what the Will/Jada Smith project is about and it is what the Depp/Heard project is about. As the year progresses I predict you will see more big splits of major het couples, blowing up in acrimonious explosions. You may even read about shots fired or stars/starlets being killed. That is what these stories have always been about, going back many decades: split the sexes. But the fake stories get more numerous and more gruesome every year. If you are a man, it makes you hate and distrust women. If you are a woman, it makes you hate and distrust men. It has been incredibly successful, as you must admit.

Don't believe me? Search on US magazine and go to IMAGES. Here are the first issues that come up:

Jana Kramer: Married to a Sex Addict

Bethany Frankel: How I Survived my Divorce from Hell

Bachelorette: Falling for a Fraud

Harry Styles: Did Olivia Cheat?

Teen Mom Leah: Humiliated by her Ex

Kourt Kardashian: Scott hits Rock Bottom

Hollywood's Most Eligible Bachelors [what they don't tell you: they're all gay]

Adele and Michelle Williams: Two Divorce bombshells

Tom Cruise: Choosing Scientology over his daughter

Taylor Swift: It's Over (with Tom) [what they don't tell you: they are co-beards, so nothing ever started]

Kaitlyn Bristowe Betrays Her Men [they're all gay]

Chris and Whitney Romance Fizzled [because they're both gay]

Every single story is a split-the-sexes project. Magazines like Us and People are about that and little else. They are a CIA project to drive a wedge between US, between us PEOPLE.

As far as Roe v. Wade is concerned, you would think some of the alternative outlets would be saying what I am saying here, warning you it is just a tarbaby. They would be telling you not to be fooled and to keep your eyes on the far bigger plates already on the table: mass murder by vaccines, shredding of the entire Constitution, ruling by mandates instead of laws, theft of trillions of dollars from treasuries for fake projects, mass censorship, theft and destruction of the food supply. But they aren't. Tucker Carlson devoted most of his show to it tonight, and never once suggested it was manufactured as a diversion. He was doing everything he could to rekindle the fires.

For myself, I think even the Pro-Choice protests are staged. Just look at the photo under title. It makes no sense in so many ways. You can't identify a single person, so it could very easily be staged or computer generated. Yes, we know living bodies are showing up for these things, but that doesn't mean they aren't paid by the government to show up. It is difficult for me to believe that real people would so obviously contradict themselves in their slogans and persons. As you know, I still call myself a liberal, and I grew up with these people, or their parents and grandparents. They didn't look or act like this in the old days. What kind of real people would hold up "bans off our bodies" signs while wearing facemasks and "I got vaccinated" stickers? Are we really supposed to believe they are yelling for bodily autonomy? The usual reading of this is that these people are brain-damaged leftists who can't think straight, but that isn't my reading. My reading is that these are more faux-leftists paid and planted by the government for you to hate on, and that the contradictions are inserted on purpose by the directors. Same with Libs of Tiktok, which is an obvious CIA front. It is part of the planned fail, the manufactured explosion of the left, and its scripted demise.

I know that many of you will say, "Great. Scripted or not scripted, the sooner the country moves away from that the better". Except that, again, as with this Roe v. Wade event, that isn't what it is about in the long run. If this were just about getting rid of critical race theory, sexual indoctrination, devil worship, and things like that, I would be all in. But that's just the candy cane to get you into the car. The car is moving hard right and they want you in it, so they have made up a monster for you to fear and hate. Once you are in the car, they will let you drive and they will cheer as you run down the monsters. But what then? Once those immediate monsters are crushed under the tires, you may look around at your fellow occupants in the car. You may finally notice that you are at the wheel of a Rolls Royce, sharing seats with fatcats from GoldmansSachs and the Rockefeller Foundation. Those guys are also far right, remember? Those guys also hate liberals, remember? They have been hunting leftists since they hired J. Edgar Hoover to do it in 1924, and actually long before that. This is common knowledge and they admit it. It is a big part of the Congressional and historical record, though few people have ever studied any historical record, mainstream or otherwise. If you don't believe me, look it up.

My point is that while moving right looks great in the short term, in the long run it is the continuance of a long disaster, one you have been tricked into following from the beginning. That is because the further right you are, the harder it is to mount any sort of resistance against the right. It is like trying to throw a punch from three inches away. You don't have enough distance to create any momentum. You have to step back to have room to swing, and you can't step back when you are riding in the same car as these people. You may think your most dreaded enemies are the loonies on Libs of Tiktok, fake purple haired obese lesbians screaming about teaching kids to masturbate or something. But you have much more powerful enemies than that, I assure you. The real revolution, supposing it ever gets off the ground, will not have the Libs of Tiktok as its primary targets. Nor will it have Communists as its primary target. Nor schoolboards nor unions nor trannies. It will have as its primary targets the superwealthy bankers and merchants who have been running things from the beginning, and who are now running them into the ground. These people and their institutions, like the Aspen Institute, the Rockefeller Foundation, the Gates Foundation, the Ford Foundation, and all the other plutocratic and faux-philanthropic organizations are the enemy. The government and all its seats of power have been captured by these people, including military and Intelligence, so the first thing you have to do is be crystal clear on that. The corruption is down to the bone, and will take decades, maybe centuries, to clean out. Any rebellion will be a thing of many generations, and as I have said many times, it will be achieved mainly by saying no. You will have to call their bluffs and keep calling them for many years, through great hardships, until the worm is at last ejected from the body.

You will have to learn to organize, which in a country like the US is no mean feat. Which is why you have to quit letting them fool you about unions. You should be stridently pro-union, which—I'm sorry to say—will make you a leftist. You may say, “Noooo, that will ally me to those creeps in Hollywood, who are always selling unions, like in Cradle Will Rock. I would rather eat my left arm than march with Tim Robbins or Susan Sarandon.” Sorry, you will have to get over it, and that should be easy since they won't be marching in any revolution against the ruling class, you can be sure. Those movies are all misdirection, since those people ARE the ruling class. They just play revolutionaries onscreen. In real life they are crypto-fascists of the first waters. As they have proved beyond any doubt by trying to kill you with a vaccine. As they have proved by selling you censorship and peer pressure and mandates as good things.

So start by getting that through your head: Hollywood and famous actors are not liberal. They just pretend to be. They are the controlled opposition, and most of them learned it from Jane Fonda, the first Modern actor of that sort. Due to her looks, she was tapped to play the loudmouthed leftist back in the late 1960s. But like all those that came after her, her role was a planned fail. You were supposed to hate her. She was blackwashing the hippie movement, just like her fellow actor Charles Manson. She was blackwashing the anti-war movement, by making it look feminine and clueless and upperclass. She pushed a lot of people on the fence into supporting the troops. Same thing now, though the project has morphed in several other directions over the decades. But these people can't be leftists, because they are ruling class. They are not the sons and daughters of truck drivers and possum trappers and IHOP waitresses, as they claim to be, they are American peerage, cloaked nobility, from ancient lines of huge wealth, most of them tied to the East India Company. So they have no interest in a classless society, much less a society based on merit. They rose through privilege and preference, and could not exist without it. So you don't have to be conservative to spite them. The only way you can spite them is to see through their smokescreens, realizing they are ultraconservative to the point of tyranny, and refusing to join them in it. If they want to trick you into moving right, move further left. That is what I do. With each passing year, I ally more strongly to the lower and middle classes, which is the real definition of left. If you ally to the ruling elite, you are right, by definition, and all the rest is just a fooling.

The confusion went into overdrive in the Reagan years, when they successfully convinced the lower and middle classes the actor Reagan was their buddy. They put him on a horse and had him say “Aw shucks”, and suddenly this peerage stooge was supposed to be a grassroots everyman. In that decade we saw the American middle class, including farmers and truckers, embrace Reagan and move right, all because he said “family values” once a week and claimed to be a fan of the Waltons or something. But Reagan was a rich fascist with no interest in helping the lower and middle classes. His only job was to capture them with fantastic lies, reading the oily cue-cards supplied by his handlers. As now, his job was to move the country hard right, and to keep its eyes off the banks, the military contractors, Intelligence, and the trillionaires behind all of them.

We are seeing a repeat of that script now, with Biden playing the part Carter played in the late 1970s, driving up inflation, creating energy crises, and manufacturing a general destabilization. All so that an anointed savior could ride in and save the day, pushing the country even further right.

But this time not all the chaos is manufactured. 911 tore the curtain and a lot of people are seeing through the old veils. People are coming to realize they are being played as suckers in this grand theater, and they are sick of it. The current conjob isn't being run for the same reason as the Reagan conjob, since the real instability in the system in the late 1970s was far less than now. The current conjob was rushed into print to answer a crisis like none before: the vaccine crime against humanity. They are desperately trying to keep your eyes off the bodies piling up all around you, but it can't work. No amount of fake wars in Ukraine or fake Supreme Court rulings or fake alien invasions can bring millions of people back to life. This is many orders of magnitude larger and more obvious than previous medical murders, where the poison was introduced far more covertly. In this case the poison was mandated in broad daylight, with huge coercion, almost at gunpoint. We were all there and we all saw it happen. We are now seeing our family members and neighbors die like flies, while they try to tell it is due to solar flares or swamp gas or something. The anger is building even as I write, and not everyone is going to agree to take Fentanyl or anti-depressants to deal with it. Not everyone is just going to conveniently commit suicide, so that this never reaches a reckoning.
